Welcome to Boulder, Colorado

"City on the Rise"

Boulder recently made the list of 29 "Best Small Cities in the U.S.!" by The National Geographic Traveler survey.

Boulder garnered the most superlatives of any city on the list, winning points for being Hipster Friendly (coffee shops, tattoo parlors, record shops, vintage stores), Musically Grooviest (music venues, live music, instrument stores), Most Caffeinated (coffee shops) and Sudsiest (breweries).

Explore these topics (and more) below to see for yourself.

Weather

Boulder is 5,430 feet in elevation and has a sunny, semi-arid climate. Hydrating during your stay is very important, as altitude sickness (headache, nausea, shortness of breath, dizziness, and tiredness) can occur. Weather conditions can change rapidly throughout each day and from day to day. During the Spring months, we may be in the 80's one day then snow the next so bring layers.

Institutes in Boulder

The National Center for Atmospheric Research (NCAR) is a federally funded research and development center devoted to service, research and education in the atmospheric and related sciences. NCAR's mission is to understand the behavior of the atmosphere and related Earth and geospace systems; to support, enhance, and extend the capabilities of the university community and the broader scientific community, nationally and internationally; to foster the transfer of knowledge and technology for the betterment of life on Earth.

At CIRES, the Cooperative Institute for Research In Environmental Sciences, more than 800 environmental scientists work to understand the dynamic Earth system, including people's relationship with the planet. CIRES is a partnership of NOAA and the University of Colorado Boulder, and our areas of expertise include weather and climate, changes at Earth's poles, air quality and atmospheric chemistry, water resources, and solid Earth sciences. Our vision is to be instrumental in ensuring a sustainable future environment by advancing scientific and societal understanding of the Earth system.

As one of 34 U.S. public research institutions belonging to the prestigious Association of American Universities (AAU)—and the only member in the Rocky Mountain region—our goal at CU Boulder is to directly affect Colorado communities through collaborative research, innovation and entrepreneurship. Our faculty, staff and students work with the broader community to establish unique connections that have lasting outcomes—both across Colorado and around the world.

In Boulder, Colorado, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) supports a powerful array of research, data collection and dissemination programs, and operational weather forecasts of Earth's atmosphere and the space environment. Most of NOAA's Boulder activities take place in the David Skaggs Research Center at Broadway Street and Rayleigh Road. NOAA's Boulder portfolio goes back to the early 1950s, when the Central Radio Propagation Laboratory moved to town to conduct cutting-edge research on atmospheric processes and solar impacts.
